TIMES TELECOM CELEBRATES SUCCESSFUL EXPANSION IN AUSTRALIA

Times Telecom announces successful pilot trial of its Australian Network, 18 months after launching nodes in Sydney and Melbourne

Sydney, Australia - March 8, 2006 - Times Telecom Inc. (Times) a global provider of alternative long distance telephony services, announced today that its Australian Office reported excellent results from an 18-month pilot trial of its Virtual Private Network (VPN). The VPN included 2 Points of Presence (POPs), one located in Sydney, and the other in Melbourne.

"We are extremely pleased to announce our official launch to the Australian market, bringing advanced VoIP functionality, products and solutions to save consumers. As a provider of VoIP communications products and services, Times is excited to offer consumer an alternative choice in telecommunications," said Mr Herman Ho, President of Times Telecom Australia.

Times Telecom management and deployment of its global VPN provides scalability and flexibility for customers and partners. Times already offers service within Canada, the United States, and now in Australia. The Company has established offices in these countries and alliances with other telecommunication providers to launch its services.

"Through establishing a stronger network presence we are enabling our customers to increase their savings on international calls. By extending our footprint in Australia, we offer flexibility while providing an easier and more affordable way for customers to connect to our network," concluded Mr. Ho.
